

Cold Stone Creamery Opens At City Center

White Plains, NY – Cold Stone Creamery, a highly successful Arizona-based ice cream retailer, recently opened its latest store at City Center in downtown White Plains. Located at 25 Mamaroneck Avenue, Cold Stone Creamery features homemade ice creams that are custom blended on a frozen granite stone.

Founded in 1988 by Donald and Susan Sutherland, Cold Stone Creamery offers consumers a unique ice cream experience. After creating a style of ice cream that was smooth and creamy, rather than the traditional hard-packed or soft-serve varieties, the Sutherlands eventually opened the first Cold Stone Creamery in Tempe, Arizona. Using only the finest ingredients, they produced the highest quality ice cream available, making it fresh each day at their store on the “cold stone” which enabled them to create what they considered to be the perfect ice cream.

Word-of-mouth quickly spread about their unique ice cream and their start-up venture blossomed. In 1995, the first franchise store opened in Tucson, Arizona, followed by the first out-of-state store in Camarillo, California. Today, Cold Stone Creamery, which is privately held, has more than 900 stores across the country, with more than 1,000 additional stores now under consideration. The company has two other Westchester locations, Rye and Scarsdale, and plans to open in Mount Kisco and Mamaroneck, as well as at two Rockland County locations, Nyack and West Nyack, and locations in Greenwich, Stamford and Norwalk, CT.

Cold Stone Creamery joins numerous other retailers and restaurateurs at City Center. City Center also includes two 35-story luxury residential towers and an 11-story loft building offering. Cappelli Enterprises Inc., the City Center developer, is a leading real estate developer and general contractor in the Northeast.
